This beautiful roadside park and picnic area located in the Index Hill is an inviting sight for motorists on US-460 and a pleasant and restful place for family outings and outdoor meetings. A project of the West Liberty Rose Garden Club, the park was developed with the aid of the State Highway Department's Division of Roadside Development. Attractively arranged flowers, shrubbery, and trees—planted by the Garden Club members—are shaded by a wide variety of native trees which surround the hillside cove on three sides. The gravelled drive, wide enough for two cars, is flanked by native stones. The park is an attractive asset to West Liberty as evidenced by its large number of visitors.

ROTARY RIG STILL DRILLING IN DEEP TEST IN ELLIOTT

Drilling continues around the clock on the deep-test well being sunk on the Cecil Ison farm at Stevens on Little Fork in eastern Elliott county. The test is being made by Monitor Petroleum Corp. of New York on a lease owned by Ashland Oil. Slim Rae of London is the drilling contractor, using a rotary rig.

The test is termed a "tight hole," and thus no information is being released on the findings. But Ray has been "making hole" for about four weeks, and has been shut down only for about 48 hours, due, it is said, to a heavy flow of gas which Halliburton "muddied off" for them.

Monitor officials told this paper they planned to drill to the granite and they estimate the depth will be 8,000 feet or more at Stevens.

Wide interest attaches to the deep-test drilling, and geologists from other companies are studying the results. Also agents of some of the big companies are seeking more leases and picking up all available unleased acreage.

Ashland Oil and Pennzoil have most of the leases in a wide area around the well. Recently other companies commenced leasing in the nearby western edge of Lawrence County, a few miles away. Crude Rice and L. S. Trimble have leased about 10,000 acres in western Lawrence for Gulf Oil, mostly on the head of Caines Creek and around Orr, also on the head of Wallowhole in extreme eastern Elliott County.

Shell also has agents in the area. And recently individuals have commenced leasing and trading on leases, including the driller, Slim Rae, according to reports.

Ashland Oil's geologist, Don Silverman, is frequently in the area.

Plan 2nd Deep Test

Monitor Petroleum says it plans to drill another deep-test well in Eastern Kentucky, and reports indicate it will be drilled in eastern Morgan.

Leasing has been resumed in eastern Morgan. Most of the land already is leased, but scattered tracts are now being picked up.

SCHOOL BOARD CHOOSES INDEX SITE FOR PROPOSED NEW HIGH SCHOOL

State Highway Dept Pledges To Build Access Roadway

The Morgan County Board of Education at its meeting Tuesday evening selected a site for a proposed new county high school.

The 30-acre site, belonging to Dr. L. C. Long, is situated across Caney Creek from KY-191 at Index and is one of five sites optioned earlier by the board as a possible site for the proposed $2 million facility.

According to a board spokesman, the decision to choose the site came after the Kentucky Department of Highways agreed to construct an access road to the property.

Total cost of buying and preparing the site previously had been estimated at $182,500, with the access road and causeway estimated at more than $50,000.

Thus, the highway department's decision to construct the access road presumably will decrease the school board's total cost for the property by $50,000.

The previously estimated cost for the site was: purchase price $60,000; access road $16,000; roadway lighting $8,000; grading site $18,600; water system $8,000; sewage disposal system $22,500.

STATE CONTENTS REAL ESTATE IS LISTED TOO LOW

A near impasse has developed between Morgan County Tax Commissioner Harry Coffee and the State Department of Revenue over reevaluating real estate in Morgan for the 1970 tax year.

The State Department of Revenue has advised Coffee that he should bring estate assessments in Morgan county "to a fair cash value" before it will approve his recapitulation of 1970 tax assessments. "The inspection period and the meeting of the board of supervisors cannot be finalized until the assessment records have been reworked and brought up to an acceptable level," says the State Revenue Department.

Coffee submitted his first recap of 1970 assessments late in April. The recap shows total assessment of property in Morgan for 1970 at $33,033,713, which was an increase of $1,395,697, or 4.2%, over 1969's assessment of $31,638,016. Real estate accounted for $25,940,362 of the county's total assessment, an increase of $773,313 over 1969.

James Bradley from the State Revenue Department was here last Thursday to confer with Coffee. He asked Coffee to come to Frankfort on the matter. But Coffee said he declined, and asked Bradley to come back and bring his records for Morgan assessments and check deeds in the clerk's office to compare assessment figures with land sale records.

The State department, Coffee was told figures that real estate in Morgan is assessed at no more than 65% of its fair cash value. Coffee contends he has set a "fair cash value" on assessments.

A good yardstick for assessing property is an average of sales prices, and not what one willing buyer pays a willing seller for particular pieces of property, Coffee contends. The Court of Appeals ruling of 1966 requires "a fair cash value" and not market prices, Coffee says.

Meanwhile, the 1970 tax bills are being delayed as well as the work of the board of supervisors.

LEGEND OF ELLIOTT SILVER TROVE GOES BACK TO PRE-CIVIL WAR DAYS

This is the season of trillium, lady's slipper, wild geranium and bloodroot.

Many people who bask beside the hearth throughout the cold winter and early spring, now take to the woods and hills to look again at the miracle of the flowers.

There are others who delight in woodland walks in cliff and canyon hikes, but who are seeking another kind of treasure.

They have nothing against nature and her spring display of wildflowers, and they even work at protecting the bounty. But their thing is hard coin—or a silver mine. And in Kentucky there are all kinds of hidden, buried—and lost treasures.

Last year a report was circulated that gold and silver had been discovered in Lawrence County. There were unbelievers; but for every doubter there is always a believer.

In March a report in The Floyd County Times said an assay from Arizona Testing Laboratories in Phoenix showed the sample to have 59.6 ounces of gold per ton.

Elliott County is neighbor to Lawrence County and has figured more in silver treasure legends than in gold, but most of all in diamonds and a diamond mine. One of the stories concerning silver goes back to pre-Civil War days.

Before that war, a Mr. Sprinkles arrived in the Laurel Cliff section of what now is Elliott County and began an extensive search of the canyon.

Later he posed as a blacksmith and used a forge as cover-up for melting silver ore into dollars and half-dollars.

A workman named Coffey revealed that the forge had a secret niche under the firebox and when an outsider approached, a piece of iron or plow was placed over the niche.

According to the workman the silver ore was found under a cliff and was carried by Sprinkles to the blacksmith shop for melting.

A short time later, the high sheriff was in need of a large sum of money and after trying every source he knew to get the money finally went to the blacksmith. Sprinkles minted close to $3000 in silver coin for him, but soon after was taken into custody for counterfeiting.

According to John A. Stegall, a history teacher at Sandy Hook High School, the story was that when Sprinkles was brought before the judge he was not sentenced but released because it is the judge's opinion the coins made by Sprinkles were superior to the silver money in circulation.

Not many years ago Charlie Stiles came from the Bluegrass accompanied by a map and a surveyor to look for Sprinkles' silver. One clue on the map was a drawing of a deer's head.

A local resident recalled that years ago he had seen such a drawing cut on a cliff in the Laurel Cliffs.

Stiles located the site, dug ore samples and took them to Cincinnati to be assayed. The assay revealed silver "and a trace of gold."

In 1915 a relatives of Stiles came to the area and took up the search for the ore. Some local men were employed to help with the digging, but were dismissed after the shaft was located.

An elderly woman known as Aunt Annie Brown used to say that when she was a girl an old Indian spent the night at her father's home and in conversation with her father the Red men said: "If the white people knew what the Indians know, they could shoe their horses cheaper with silver than they could buy or make iron shoes."

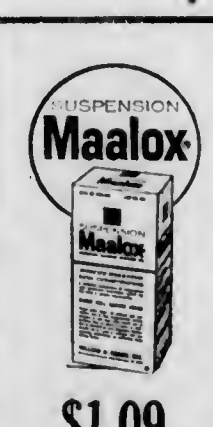

According to Stegall, another set of explorers came to the area in 1966.

It might be well for woodland hikers to search for strange signs on rocks while they look for wildflowers. If they see turkey tracks, arrow signs or running snakes carved in rock, proceed as indicated, but if they come upon a rock carving of a coiled snake or representation of the sun—stop, look closely . . . but please, don't pick the flowers.

"Plenty of Liquids"
If your doctor recommends "plenty of liquids" when treating your youngster's cold or virus, keep a supply of cool, refreshing fruit punch handy on the patient's night table. Fill a thermos with chilled punch and place it, with some paper cups, within easy reach. Your little one may even enjoy pouring his own punch when it's time to drink the prescribed liquid.

7 Natural Fruit Juices
Canned or frozen fruit punch, a year-round favorite with the children, is an excellent beverage for sniffling, feverish youngsters. Hawaiian Punch, for example, is a healthful blend of seven natural fruit juices, loaded with Vitamin C. The children can choose between the fruit juicy red, grape, orange and pineapple flavors.
When the children are sick, their appetites are often dulled. Just when the intake of nutritious food is very important for their recovery, Punch can also be the basis of a delicious pink egg nog "meal-in-a-glass." The combination of the punch with milk and egg is an extremely nourishing one. To make a pink egg nog, simply combine 1 egg, 1 cup milk and 3 tablespoons of undiluted fruit juicy red Hawaiian Punch frozen concentrate; whirl in a blender or mix with a beater until foamy. Try it for yourself, too . . . it's delicious.

Whose Offence Is Greatest?

(FLOYD COUNTY TIMES)

Down in Johnson County, the other day, somebody took the law into his own hands and stopped overloaded coal trucks from running by puncturing the tires with bullets.

That was a flagrant violation of the law—an act which, obviously, was born of contempt for the law. The rifleman may be, and should be, arrested and prosecuted.

On the other hand, it should be pointed out that the owners and drivers of those trucks were in violation of the law, also. They knew their loads were in excess of the legal limit—knew this not only last week but all the weeks and months they have been hauling coal. They held the law in contempt not only for the few moments it takes to fire a few shots at truck tires but on every trip made over all those miles, hauling coal to a tippie.

So what? Who is to feel the weight of the law? State and county officials have already made it very clear that the coal-hauler is sacrosanct.

Then what are they going to do with the fellow who fights back with live ammunition?

Who is the greater law-breaker—the men who work and haul illegal weight loads, the men who remonstrate and, failing to get a hearing, take gun in hand—or the official who gets himself into such a spot that he can't do much with either of these others?

BUSINESS HERE AND HEREABOUTS

RAISES CIG PRICE — R. J. Reynolds this week raised wholesale prices of its cigarettes just under a penny a pack, following the lead of four other manufacturers which recently upped their prices. The increase coupled with a half-cent Kentucky tobacco increase scheduled to go into effect July 1, will boost wholesale prices enough to cause retailers to jump prices 2 cents a pack, or more.

CASH INSTEAD OF FOOD STAMPS — The White House is seriously considering a confidential proposal that would abolish the foodstamp program and substitute higher cash payments to the poor. The proposal would increase the guaranteed minimum income for families of four under President Nixon's proposed welfare-reform plan from $1,600 to $2,200 a year. The idea has been strongly pushed by Labor Secretary George P. Shultz and others. A decision by President Nixon is expected next week. The change, according to one official, could add as many as 4 million additional persons eligible for payments.

KENTUCKY HILLS RETREAT — A group of Lawrence and Johnson County business men have purchased land in the Evergreen community of Lawrence County and are establishing Kentucky Hills Retreat, a long a man-made lake, which they say will offer recreational facilities for every member of a family. Harvey Hall, president of the firm, says major proposed facilities include a 3-hole golf course, clubhouse, restaurant, club for teenagers, motel and summer camp for youngsters. (Clean recreation in a moral atmosphere is promised, including dances, ball games, swimming, canoeing, horseshoe pits, and hay rides. Site of the retreat is a 100-acre tract west of Louisa.)

FARM PRICES — Prices received by farmers increased one-third of one percent in May, ending a decline of two straight months, and were 1.5% more than a year ago. But the farm price index still is eight points below the five-year average reached in February before declining during March and April. The Crop Reporting Board said higher prices for vegetables and fruits contributed to the May increase. Lower prices were reported for eggs, cattle and hogs. Beef cattle averaged $27.90 a cwt the same as a year ago. Hogs averaged $22.90, down from $23.90 in April. Farm prices averaged 72% of parity, or full purchasing power, compared with 74% a year earlier.

RHUBARB FIRST USED AS A MEDICINE

By Nevlye Shackelford,
Staff Writer, U. K. College of Agriculture

LEXINGTON, Ky. — As a gardener, Dr. John Gerard set great store by rhubarb stalks as a sauce and a filler for pies. As a physician, he was equally impressed with its roots as a medicine and an aid to feminine beauty.

Writing in his famous 16th century Herbal, he stated that if, along with a few other herbs, rhubarb roots were steeped for "three days" in strong ale and used as a table drink for three weeks, it would "purify the blood and make young wenches faire and cherry-like."

Most gardeners, both past and present, have agreed with Old Gerard that rhubarb does indeed make wonderful, tangy pies and appetizing sauces. But, they were not, and have not been, too much concerned with producing it as a medicine.

As to its genesis, rhubarb which most Americans call "pieplant," supposedly originated in the cold tundras of ancient Siberia. The earliest records of its use dates back to about 2700 B.C. in China where its roots were used as a drug.

When its stalks were first used as a food, no one knows for sure, but plant detectives state that it was introduced into Europe around 1600 and first grown for food in Italy. By 1800, it was a common plant in home gardens of the New England States where it was grown for tarts and pies. In 1628, it was being listed for sale in American seed catalogs.

Rhubarb is a perennial and is not adapted to hot climates. It grows well, however, in Kentucky and in times past no home garden was considered complete without a clump of this fine plant. One of the first things a young girl used to do after standing up before a preacher and agreeing to share the weal and woe of some equally young rustic, was to secure some rhubarb roots for her garden.

She knew that one of the best ways of keeping a farmer-husband happy was to always have pie on the table, especially in early spring. She also knew that rhubarb was the first plant of spring to produce the filler for pies.

While rhubarb lends itself to the preparation of several delightful dishes which a nutritionist or Home Demonstration Agent can tell about, the plant, paradoxically enough, can also be dangerous. The leaves contain a poisonous substance in sufficient amounts, if eaten, to cause serious illness or even death.

But nobody is likely to eat enough rhubarb leaves to cause serious harm. Like the stalks which raw and unsweetened, have a tooth-sharpening, throat cutting sharpness, the leaves are likewise tart. Only a person or animal unalterably determined to commit suicide could possibly ingest enough rhubarb leaves to put him out of business permanently.

Rhubarb, like many other horticultural plants, does not come true to seed. As a consequence, horticulturists do not advise attempts to propagate the plant in this manner. Instead, they suggest, like the young bride, to propagate it vegetatively by dividing the clumps of plants and replanting the roots.

A rhubarb root with some of the underground stem structures or buds from which the leaves arise will do the job, but since it is a somewhat slow-growing plant, it may take about three years for it to reach productive stage.

This Siberian plant makes wonderful cobbler pies and is an asset to any vegetable garden. As did quaint Old Gerard, modern horticulturists concerned with everybody having a varied diet of vegetables, highly recommend it. Among our common vegetables, it is a most unusual plant.

"Keep your yearnings within your earnings," Benjamin Franklin.

Bigger Checks From Washington...

Extra Cash To Spend In Morgan Co.

May 18 — Residents of Morgan County will have more money to spend in the months ahead, thanks to bigger checks arriving from Washington.

Much of this cash will be in the form of refunds to local taxpayers. They are running larger than ever, the figures show.

More money will be going, also, to postal workers and other Federal employees in the area. Their incomes have been upped by 6 percent, retroactive to December 27th.

Finally, there are the retired people and others who receive social security payments each month. Their checks have been increased by 15 percent, with an additional check last month to cover the increase for January and February, previously omitted.

All of which means more money for consumers to spend and increased business for local merchants.

Tax refunds will go to about 2,440 in Morgan County and will amount to no less than $583,000, it is estimated. This is based upon figures from the Treasury Department as to the size and number of checks being mailed out.

The average refund is for $239, it states. Last year, by way of comparison, the average return was only $198.

The local buying potential is being improved, also, by the bigger social security checks. The amount paid in the past four months to the 1,890 or so in Morgan County who are receiving them was nearly $62,000 greater than in the previous four months.

Federal employees in the local area will also have more spending money. They will share in the hike of more than $2.5 billion that will be distributed under the temporary settlement.

Some $12.3 billion will be returned to 53 million taxpayers throughout the country to cover their over-payments. Last year, because of the 10 percent surtax, there were only 50 million refunds. They totaled $10.2 billion.

The $2.6 billion jump represents a considerable increase in buying power.

YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY—

BRIDES SHOULD NOTIFY SOCIAL SECURITY ABOUT NAME CHANGES

Girls getting married this June might not think of sending a wedding announcement to their social security office. But the Social Security Administration would like to know the bride's new name as soon as possible.

Thomas B. Thompson, district manager for social security in Ashland, this week reminded newlyweds that up-to-date records are important if earnings are to be recorded properly and without delay.

These earnings records will help to determine how much is paid some day in retirement, survivors, or disability benefits. Records which are incomplete or incorrect can result in delay or even in reduction of amounts payable.

"Today's bride could receive social security payments long before she and her husband reach retirement age," Thompson said. "More than 8 million Americans under 65 now get regular monthly checks."

An automobile accident that disables a young husband or his wife could set the social security wheels in motion. With as little as 1½ years of work under social security—including credit for part-time and summer jobs—benefits could be paid to the family of a young man or young woman.

"As the family grows, it is possible that one of the children may become disabled before the age of 18. If he is still disabled when one of his parents starts getting retirement or disability benefits or dies, he can get monthly payments for as long as he is disabled—perhaps the rest of his life," Thompson pointed out.

"If a child gets benefits based on his father's work record, the child's mother may also be eligible for benefits."

The Ashland office is located at 1816 Carter Avenue, and is open Monday through Friday. Thompson again reminded, however, that Monday is a very busy day, and that faster service can ordinarily be provided on another day of the week.

$163,955 FOR COUNTY & SECONDARY ROADS IN ELLIOTT SET THIS YEAR

County Aid Up 30% And Rural Secondary
Aid Is Up By 17%

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 25—Annual State Aid for Elliott County's roads has increased more than $25,000 during the past two years, Governor Louie B. Nunn announced today.

This is an increase of 20.6 per cent from the 1967-68 fiscal year to the 1969-70 fiscal year. Elliott County's Rural Secondary program went from $140,213 in fiscal year 1967 to $154,537 the next fiscal year and to $163,955 this fiscal year. This represents a 17 per cent increase in funds available for rural road improvements. The 1970-71 fiscal year allotment was announced recently at $173,793.

County Road Aid money has also increased significantly. For the 1967-68 fiscal year, Elliott County received an allocation of only $55,995. The following fiscal year the allocation was $67,194. This fiscal year the allocation was $72,794. Another increase since fiscal year 1967 has been approximately 30 per cent.

Commissioner of Highways Eugene Goss explained that the County Road Aid and Rural Secondary programs are two ways in which the state helps the counties meet their responsibilities for county roads.

The significant increase in funds for county roads program is helping the counties to build and maintain a better road system, Goss said.

ELLIOTT WATER PLANT COMPLETE; PUMPING 20,000 GALLONS A DAY

By GEORGE WOLFFORD

A year ago there were complaints that went so far as to claim the water here was so bad one man had to brush his teeth in Seven-Up. Wells were drying up, water rationed, and what there was had the taint of iron and rusty pipes.

This week, with completion of a new water service system, the 168 customers of the Sandy Hook water district are hooked on and drawing all the fresh, treated water they want.

The water plant went into operation the first of this month, furnishing some 20,000 gallons a day to customers in the city.

Three wells, drilled a thousand feet apart, are serving the plant and producing as expected. The system is operated by control equipment which draws alternately on the three wells.

Treated water is pumped to a 100,000 gallon tank near the home of County Attorney Bill Redwine.

It is all a far cry from the parched shout of last spring, when Elliott County-seat residents protested the slowness of construction, particularly the legal complications involved.

After explanation in meetings with Public Service Commissioner Harold E. Kelley, they accepted the legal red tape as a necessary part of the system and sat back to await a new water plant.

The plant, which cost $84,000, is located on Howard's Creek, included lines to the storage tank. A second contract, for $32,000, added 30 new customers and lines to serve them. All old distribution lines were retained, according to Curt Ferguson, secretary of the water firm, but have been flushed this spring.

"It's up to property owners to flush their own home lines," he added, noting that action takes only five to 10 gallons of water.

But the system hasn't yet accepted its largest customer, Sandy Hook High School is still on its own well and pump, but will make the shift this month. "When they do, our daily output will double," Mr. Ferguson said.

"We're also hopeful we'll add another large customer — when some manufacturer locates in the former Mico building."

A word to the wise is sufficient. Safety is the work. Many hidden hazards lie about the home. Take a safety check of your home, examining especially for electrical equipment, medicines, slippery rugs, fire hazards and the like.

More people die from worry than work—so work harder and you'll have less time to worry for a loophole later.

RANGER COLUMN

BY JOE MAUK
Forestry Technician

May 18 — Some time ago the Forest Service initiated a superior tree program or project. The idea is to locate superior trees of different species. The project is set up in two sections one for yellow pines and one for hardwood trees. Currently, as above average trees are located by foresters on the various state forestry agencies or other cooperators within the region, the tree is marked by plastic flagging or some similar method. The diameter of the tree, the height overall, the height of the stem of the tree containing clear logs, as well as the height into the limbs that will produce merchantable logs and other data, are taken. Type or soil and other pertinent information concerning the location of the growing site on which the tree is located is also recorded.

This information is forwarded to the Regional Office for review and analysis, should it appear to be of superior size and quality for the region a record is made of its superior qualities. Then one of the foresters assigned to the project will make an on the ground examination of the tree. If it has sufficient superior qualities based on the growing site and area in which it is located, it will be set up as a superior tree. Then it will be determined as to how it will serve the superior tree projects.

The species of tree will determine its future use. It may be used as a seed source by collection of acorns, or seeds from the tree for direct planting to produce seedlings. In some instances cutting from the limbs or shoots will be used for grafting to existing trees now located at the Forest Service Beech Creek Seed orchard located near, Murphy, North Carolina, to produce seed.

Last week Walter Smith, regional tree improvement forester, spent a day here on the Morehead District with District Ranger Richard Bonyata and Forester Ron Hevener. They spent most of the time in the field looking at prospective trees and discussing various phases of the project.

The period considered by state law as fire hazard period for the spring season beginning March 1, ended on May 15. That is the period during which burning brush or other inflammable materials within 150 feet of any woodland or brushland, except between the hours of 4:30 p.m. and midnight is prohibited by Kentucky state statute 149.400.

Such burning may be done lawfully anytime during the day, provided he has complied with section 149.375 which requires the cutting and piling of such brush or inflammable material, and carefully cleared around some, to prevent the spread of such fires to lands other than those owned or leased by him.

In other words, you may burn brush or other debris at any hour, however, you are still responsible for keeping it under your control and preventing its spread to the property of another.

A VISIT WITH NATURE—

Trees Manufacture Oxygen Don't Cut

RUFUS M. REED
of Martin County

The glory of the earth in summer green goes in every direction as far as the eye can see; The earth in summer green is dressed up as proud as any queen. Green is the color of peace and beauty; it glorifies the land and harmonizes with the earth; it is restful to the eye; it is a healer of man's soul; it steals away his dull cares and gives him a feeling of being renewed in body and mind.

Last winter we looked on the hills, valleys and plains arrayed in the drab hues of gray and brown; the and seemed lifeless, dead, but spring came at last and almost overnight the whole earth burst out in the glory of green. Every leaf and blade of grass has an abundance of nature's magic stuff—green chlorophyll. It is the sustainer of life, the builder of foods for man and animals. It produces our vegetables for the tables; it makes carbohydrates to build the tree.

The green leaves of summer are the renewers and builders of earth's oxygen supply. The leaves take in air, use the carbon dioxide for making starches and sugars; the oxygen is expelled into the air and makes it pure and sweet. A breath of the fresh, woodland air is invigorating; it always seems cool, inviting and restful under a canopy of green trees. What a pity it is that man destroys so many trees; he never fully appreciates the great bounties of nature. He seldom thinks of the beauty and glory of the earth all dressed in green. He seldom thanks the infinite and beneficent processes of nature that work always for his benefit. Instead he endangers his oxygen supply by destroying the trees; he takes such blessings as the green earth all too casual and does not realize that trees purify the air, build the food for his body.

Summer leaves are the umbrellas of nature: they shade the earth and keep it moist and cool. They prevent baking and drying out of the soil. Leaf umbrellas shade the squirrels in their summer nests; they shade the mother bird as she incubates her eggs; they hide the birds and little animals from the sharp eyes of predators. They cover the ugly scars made on earth's face by man and his ruthless machines.

The leaf is also one of nature's finest musicians; it sings and lisps and dances in every

Look what happen to the earth when the trees are all cut down and no crop of leaves are produced to act as an umbrella to shade and protect the earth. A naked land quickly becomes sterile; the fountains dry up, the moisture evaporates fast and the land soon falls a victim of erosion. The removal of the trees from the land is a quick way to turn it into a barren desert, a wasteland where no life can thrive.

The green leaf is truly one of nature's greatest miracles. It is a chemical laboratory for making food and it knows how to use the energy of the sun for power to run its food factory. Without the work of the leaf, no life could long exist on this planet.

A leaf is also one of nature's greatest work of art. When we study the structure of a leaf under the microscope, it gives us a feeling akin to awe. Here we behold the wondrous work of nature! On the underside of the leaf there are millions of tiny doors, called Stomata, which comes from the Greek word, STOMA, meaning a MOUTH. These microscopic "mouths" are the breathing pores of a leaf. Through them it takes in air and releases the oxygen it doesn't need in making starches and sugars. The leaf also releases moisture by the process of transpiration, which keeps the earth cool and fresh.

The leaf is also one of nature's finest musicians; it sings and lisps and dances in every wind that blows. It trembles, shivers and shakes, and sometimes it waves at one like a human hand, as if to invite one to come and find peace and rest in the green woods of summer.

The life of the leaf lasts but one short season. In autumn it comes to its end in a blaze of which nature paints her magic colors in vivid rainbow hues. It is soon plucked from the tree by the autumn winds and is sometimes carried afar before it finally settles down to become a part of the leaf mold of the forest. It will gradually decay and add its substance to the soil, to help build the humus that sustains the plants of future years.

Fallen leaves form a thick mold that acts like a sponge to catch and conserve moisture; they cover the winter earth like a blanket and keep the roots of trees and plants alive and warm through the cold winter.

Man with all his vaunted wisdom cannot make a living leaf, nor a single blade of grass. He lacks the power to give them the magic chlorophyll. An artificial leaf is but a poor imitation of the real thing. It may often look real and may fool the eye, but when we touch it, it feels stiff and unreal, like something dead and yet presuming to be alive. An artificial leaf has no life, no breath; it cannot carry on the work of photosynthesis. When we feel its soft, velvety texture and we know it is a breathing, living miracle.

ODDS AND ENDS

By Earl Kanner, Jr.

NO LOCUSTS THIS YEAR

State Wildlife Biologist
 Harold Barber of West Liberty called to confirm that Arthur Johnson was "definitely right."
 This is not "locust year" in Eastern Kentucky. Thus, Ne-vyle Shackelford's story of two weeks ago stating that locusts would appear this summer was inaccurate. According to Harold, 17-year locusts will appear this year in southern Illinois, southern Indiana, and parts of western Kentucky, but not in eastern Kentucky. Locusts in this area are on a different cycle than those in the areas mentioned above and will not emerge until 1974, Harold says.

This hardworking country
 editor, printer, proofreader, ad taker, and general handyman around the printshop made the mistake of complaining aloud to the wife about not having enough time to go fishing anymore. This morning, we found the following message on our typewriter:
 "Men seldom die of hard work—activity is God's medicine." After mulling this over a bit we must admit that we were thoroughly agree. However, note the word "seldom."
 And though we probably shouldn't mention it, it also occurs to us that an overdose of medicine can kill you.

Last week, Floyd County Times Publisher Norman Allen of Prestonsburg penned the following lines for his column,
 "This Town, That World."
 Publisher Allen has a way with words and his "think piece" struck a responsive chord with this reader. In fact it struck several. We think it with you—

THE PAUSE THAT REFRESHES

"I had my own Walden's Pond, the other night I was "keeping house" at our camp, which is really only a small tent, far back in the head of Big Branch on Dewey Lake.
 Minutes after my arrival at camp, the last fishing boat roared away in the dusk, and there I was, as alone as if this spot were a hundred miles from civilization.
 I sat the dusk out and into the darkness, looking and listening and feeling. More than once, I thought: This is what so many people need —to get to some out-of-the-way refuge where you're only one person and none other of your kind can hear or see or be heard and seen. In these peaceful surroundings I found it difficult to imagine that rioting, screaming, burning, killing was taking place out there somewhere, across these hills, beyond this silence.

The evening star burned bright, low and just above the V that the hills made, aeons ago, when they stepped aside to let Big Branch out to join Johns Creek. Other stars glim-mered faintly, higher in their vaulted field. For the first time, I noticed how one leaf made a serrated gap in the expanse above, and I wondered how many millions of square miles of that distant space were covered by this tiny leaf, so near the eye.

Two whippoorwills began their nocturnal routine that after a few hours becomes tiresome. Small fish plopped here and there, some in the very spot where our fisherman friend had been casting, half an hour earlier. There was no wind but there were patches of ripply water, small islands of movement on a lake that was otherwise glassy-still.
 Then came the sound I had been waiting for—the tra-loom of a bullfrog, back there in the gloom of an overhanging bank. As this fellow got into high gear with his deep, resonant voice, a younger frog apparently decided another voice was needed, and he chimed in, giving it all he had,
 but he didn't have much.
 Sounded as if his voice was changing. He put a good deal of spirit into the concert, and seemed to sound off just as his elder was taking aboard a belly full of fresh air, yet he didn't belong in this company.
 I wished he would plain shut up. And just then as this youngster raised his voice again a third frog, apparently the patriarch of the tribe, gave with a bellow that was deeper, more resounding even than that of the first basso. And the youngster who failed to impress suddenly ended his efforts and called it a night.

When I set out alone for camp, I dreaded the prospect of not being able to take along a book for a bit of reading. But all that was quickly forgotten.

It occurred to me, once, that I would have nobody to talk to. But I did.

—Norman Allen

4TH NATL. SQUARE DANCE CONTEST SET AT NATURAL BRIDGE JUNE 13

SALDE, Ky. — Handclapping and toctapping to mountain music will be back in style at Kentucky's Natural Bridge State Resort Park come Saturday afternoon and night, June 13, as mountain-style square dance teams from throughout the country will promenade to Hoedown Island, the big outdoor platform for the Fourth Annual National Mountain-style Square Dance Contest. The afternoon event will be a get-acquainted program with the visiting teams warming up for the big contest that starts at 7:30 p.m.

A number of teams have already registered for the giant event. Included are: The Smokey Mountain Cloggers, The Avery Creek Smooth Dancers, and the A. C. Reynolds High School Square Dancers from Arden, North Carolina; The Fall Creek Falls Hoedowners from Upper Marlboro, Maryland and Washington, D. C.; the Promanaders from Doyle, Tennessee; the Oxon Hill Cloggers, from Oxon Hill, Maryland; the Middle River Cloggers from Connersville, Georgia; the Pisgah View Ranch Dancers from Candler, North Carolina; and the Oldtimers from Sparta, Tennessee. Kentucky teams include the Powell County Promanaders; the Wheelers from Leeco, Kentucky; The Hill Country Hoedowners from Slade and the Foothill Scramblers from Rogers, Kentucky. Many more teams are expected to register before the contest.

The contest will be divided into four divisions: senior set, junior set, senior individual hoedowning, and junior individual hoedowning. A total of $400.00 will be presented in prizes to the participating teams and individuals. The style of dancing will be the old-fashioned mountain hoedown or clog step, that was popular during the pioneer days of early America.

Richard Jett of West Liberty will produce, direct, and serve as master of ceremonies for the program which is sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Parks. Mr. Jett stated that "The purpose of the colorful program is to preserve and perpetuate the customs of days gone by and to permit today's generation to observe and participate in some of the games and dances that were enjoyed by the early Appalachian settlers."

Admission to the afternoon program is free. The evening program admission will be $1.00 for both adults and children. Last year approximately 2,500 people attended the program.

DEDUCT G.I. INSURANCE PREMIUMS FROM PENSION CHECK, VA SUGGESTS
The Veterans Administration suggests that G.I. insurance policyholders who receive VA compensation or pension payments may want to consider having their insurance premiums deducted from their monthly checks.

In making that suggestion, Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson said about a quarter of a million veterans already pay their insurance premiums this way.

He pointed out that in order to use this convenient method, the veteran's monthly benefit check must be equal to or greater than the premium paid.

One of the advantages of the deduction method is that payments of premiums are automatic, reducing the likelihood that the insurance will lapse.

Other advantages are that the veteran saves time, check or money order costs, and postage and it costs the government less to process, Johnson explained.

He also said veterans with active VA insurance policies may use the monthly deduction method to repay loans on their policies.

FARM AND HOME NOTES

Rotate Grazing On Early Summer Pastures

From May to late June, most farmers have more lush pastures than the cattle need. But from July through September, many farmers run short of grazing—if not in volume, at least in feed quality. Farmers can ease this situation by confining their cattle to an area they can graze down in a week to 10 days.

In many instances, this maneuver will call for temporary fencing. Many farmers are using the surplus ungrazed area for high-quality hay and silage. These cuttings are made in the early-bloom legume stages and before the grass seed heads are formed. The majority of this food is held for use in the winter. Yet, due to mid-summer drought in many parts of the state, a large quantity was fed last summer.

Mowing is just as important early in the season as late in the year. Mowing will eliminate tall, mature plants that have been refused by livestock as well as destroy weeds. A good guide is to mow following each grazing-off.

Farmers who haven't top-dressed their pastures yet, should attend to this important chore after mowing or grazing. A current soil test is recommended. If the stand is more than 25% legume, there will be no need for nitrogen—just phosphate and potash. If the legume stand is less than 25%, include nitrogen in the treatment.

Apple Scab

The wet, rainy spring has been favorable for scab infections and unfavorable for spraying. Hence, scab spots can be seen on many scabby varieties such as Red Delicious, Rome, Turley, Stayman, and others where early season control was not good. Any summer rains will scatter scab spores from these spots causing possible summer scab infections. Hence, summer fungicides will be important in these cases.

Apples

Fire Blight has already been seen on apples and pears but not serious to date. Agrinycin spray now may still be applied at the rate of 50 to 100 parts per million up to 50 days of harvest on bearing trees. Non-bearing young trees may be sprayed with Agrinycin as desired for twig blight control.

Periodical Cicade (17-Year or 13-Year Locusts)
Are due to appear this year in counties and areas where they appeared in 1953 or in 1957. They are expected to emerge from the soil by mid-May to early June and their high whine can then be heard all over the infested area. Some early ones were heard in Louisville on May 12 and in Meigs and Russell Counties on May 14-15. Damage to trees is caused by their vigorous egg-laying punctures on the lower side of young twigs. However, egg laying does not start until about a week after emergence starts. The adults can be killed by sprays of Sevin, 50% W.P. at 2 pounds per 100 gallons, applied to fruit trees in infested areas at weekly intervals. It often pays to spray heavily infested wooded areas near or surrounding an orchard to kill many adults before they move to the fruit planting. Newly planted or small trees are often protected by covering them tightly with tobacco canvas while the locusts are present.

Emergence areas will have many, many small holes in the soil showing where the pests leave the soil. In order to keep up with locust emergence please send a note to W. D. Armstrong, Box 469, Princeton, Ky. 42445, reporting when the locusts appear in your area and the size and severity of the attack and the last year that they emerged in your area (1953 or 1957).

COMBS URGES HARD WORK FOR SCHOOLS
MOREHEAD, Ky. (AP) — Former Gov. Bert T. Combs urged the Morehead State University Alumni Association Saturday night to work harder for public education in Kentucky.

Appearing at the group's annual awards banquet, Combs, a judge on the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, delivered a non-political address sprinkled with anecdotes from his career in law and politics.

The former governor noted that his positions on the federal bench limited his range of subjects.

Near the end of his remarks, Combs said Kentucky was "falling behind the national average in support of education."

GOVERNOR PLEDGES 'UNYIELDING FIRMNESS' IN PROTECTING STUDENT'S RIGHTS TO STUDY

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Gov. Louie B. Nunn pledged continued confidence in the vast majority of Kentucky's young people and assured them their pursuit of "intellectual excellence" in the state's colleges and universities will be protected with "unyielding firmness."

Addressing the annual commencement exercises at Frankfort High School here, the governor insisted that young people who are "concerned for the preservation of our basic institutions have rights, too." "They have the right to study, to attend class, to take examinations and to be honored at commencement without fear of arson, intimidation or interruption."

The governor's 18-year-old son, Stephen, a graduating senior, was among the audience in the packed high school gymnasium.

The address by the chief executive was broadcast on several television stations and on a special statewide radio network.

Within the past two years, the governor pointed out, Kentucky has addressed itself to the problem of campus unrest and has "set an example for the nation by effectively meeting the threat of violence while developing innovative outlets for student dissent."

He cited specifically establishment of the Governor's Student Advisory Commission 18 months ago, major positions of responsibility that young leaders hold in the present state administration and the state's unique Legislative Intern Program.

Kentucky was the first state in the nation he said, to "welcome student leaders" to membership on the boards of all public colleges and universities.

In expanding on that theme, the governor announced that he will appoint "qualified students" to serve on both the State Air Pollution Control Commission and the State Water Pollution Control Commission. Presumably, they will fill one or more of the seats added to each commission by the 1970 legislature.

These appointments, the governor said, should "again disprove the claim that our system of government is closed."

Sneaking as much to his radio and television audience as to those in the auditorium, he told young people that "the people of Kentucky have paid unselfishly for the costly privilege of applauding you tonight. Over the years, they have shared more and more of their substance with you."

Today he said, 63 cents of every General Fund tax dollar is allocated to education in Kentucky.

"By investing millions of dollars," he reminded them, "a place has been prepared for you in a progressive system of state colleges and universities that has significantly improved Kentucky's educational image."

"It is time we remember for what and for whom these sacrifices were made."

This system of colleges and universities, he insisted, "belongs not to just the professional education community and certainly not to a radical student minority."

"It belongs to all of us."

Damage to property during the recent disturbance on the University of Kentucky campus at Lexington has run well over a quarter of a million dollars, the governor said.

"If all available means are not exhausted to recover these damages from those who are responsible it will be a slap in the face to every Kentucky taxpayer. I urge and encourage university officials to institute civil suits, if necessary, to recover full damages."

Obviously moved, the governor cautioned his young audience that they must make daily decisions that will "shape their destinies" in a time of "great social turmoil" and in an atmosphere "hostile to clear thinking."

"I believe you are capable of meeting this challenge," he said. "I have confidence in your ability to choose wisely."
